Are Good Pierogis the only pierogis you'll ever need? Yes! Drive to Martha's Vineyard and eat them. Tell them, "Alan Dershowitz ain't got no panties on." We don't know if they'll give you a discount, but they might laugh.

If there's one thing anybody knows about famed lawyer Alan Dershowitz's life and career, it's that he has panties on, except for all the times he's being a nudist, which by definition implies the absence of panties. One time he definitely always had panties on? When he was getting a massage at Jeffrey Epstein's Haus of Naked. That's a five-alarm-panty-party for Alan Dershowitz, he has always assured us.

Another time Alan Dershowitz is always wearing panties — at least as far as we've heard — is when he's having his civil rights and his bill of rights and his human rights violated by the evil shopkeepers and librarians of Martha's Vineyard, where nobody will invite him over for dinner because they hate his guts, avec ou sans panties. Apparently the Jewish Democrats on Martha's Vineyard really loathe El Chico Desnudo. Also everybody else on Martha's Vineyard hates him, all the other liberals, and this makes Alan Dershowitz feel lonely and, well, naked. They won't let him come to brunch, and it's definitely not because he's naked and won't stop dipping his balls in the hollandaise, why would he dip his balls there, that's not where Alan Dershowitz's balls go.

They won't let him do his world-renowned standing-room-only readings and lectures at the meeting room at the library, it is an outrage, it is a seven deadly sins, it is a violation of the Geneva Conventions. Larry David doesn't invite him over, Barack Obama skips his birthday parties, and now he has to sue a Martha's Vineyard farmer's market vendor because they wouldn't give him a dumpling.

A pierogi, to be specific. The vendor wouldn't give him a pierogi, so now he has to show them his pierogi.

WITH PANTIES ON.

Dershowitz explained what's going on in exhaustive detail on his Rumble show, but first here's a tweet:

OK, so here's the situation, here is Alan Dershowitz's Yelp review for "that guy at the farmer's market with the pierogis."

“There was the pierogi place,” he said. “They’re Ukrainian, Russian delicacies. And I had gone there a few times before, and I bought the pierogi. They were ok. They were not my grandmother’s pierogi, but they were ok.”

Alan Dershowitz just wanted some pierogis, even though they weren’t that good, just OK.

BUT THEN HERE’S WHAT HAPPENED, ALAN SAYS:

DERSHOWITZ: Can I have six pierogi?

“BIGOTED VENDOR”: No.

DERSHOWITZ: Oh, you’ve run out of pierogi? Too bad.

“BIGOTED VENDOR”: No, no, no. We have plenty of pierogi. I just won’t sell them to you.

DERSHOWITZ: What do you mean you won’t sell them to me?

“BIGOTED VENDOR”: I won’t sell them to you because I don’t approve of your politics. I don’t approve of who you’ve represented. I don’t approve of who you support.

DERSHOWITZ: What is it about my politics that you don’t–

“BIGOTED VENDOR”: I’m not gonna tell you. I just don’t like your politics.

Love it when vendors at the farmer’s market are like “Forsooth, I don’t approve of you! I forsake you! You shan’t have six pierogis today, not to put in your belly, not to eat with panties on, not to slather in your Alan Dershowitz ball-ondaise sauce and save for later!” It’s just how farmer’s market vendors talk.

“The clear implication was that he opposed me because I defended Donald Trump on the floor of the Senate,” Dershowitz added. “I think that’s illegal.”

Alan Dershowitz is a very famous lawyer.

It gets better, because there’s video of at least part of the situation, or at least the aftermath, don’t worry it’s safe for work. Dershowitz was also filming, because he is a serious lawyer and we imagine he knows that sometimes cops and ICE agents and pierogi vendors are full of lies.

This is the other person’s video, though:

Therein, you can see the cop gently explaining to Alan Dershowitz The Very Famous Lawyer that according to his own understanding, restaurants can refuse service, but if he wants to pursue it further, he can pursue it civilly. Oh yes, Alan Dershowitz says! He is going to put this on the internet too, Alan Dershowitz says! That'll be the end of this reign of terror for this pierogi seller whose pierogis are OK but not like Alan Dershowitz's grandmother's pierogis!

If you'd like to listen to Dershowitz debate the cop for one hundred hours on whether it's OK for people to discriminate against Alan Dershowitz based on his protected class of sucking so much, that's in that video. You can't discriminate on the basis of sexual orientation or race, so how is it fair to discriminate against Alan Dershowitz on the basis of fuck that guy, we hate him? He asks to speak to the manager. The cop explains that actually he's in charge right now. Dershowitz explains he's lived here for 53 years and nobody has ever sent him home without pierogi in his belly. He accuses the extremely patient cop of "silencing" him. The cop gently explains that he is causing a disruption, that multiple people have complained, and that no, he may not stand next to the pierogi stand and tell people not to go to the pierogi stand. Alan Dershowitz explains that he would like to get some lemonade.

The user who posted the video says:

"I met Allen Dechowitz [sic] today. I stopped him from harassing a vendor who wouldn't serve him pierogi at the farmer's market on Martha's Vineyard."

The pierogi person, or the person who is presumably the pierogi person, replied, "Hey, thank you so much!"

Again, Dershowitz rushed to get on Rumble and talk about all of this, and he did so wearing a Martha's Vineyard Farmer's Market T-shirt. If you choose to subject yourself to this, skip to 3:54 or so in the video. He talks for a LONG VERY LONG TIME, about how the farmer's market is on QUASI public land, and he pronounces QUASI like SWAYZE.

He explains that he really wanted to go to the farmer's market that day because it was corn day, and he got there early, because corn day. He says corn day wasn't supposed to be until August 1, but he had "insider information" that told him corn day would be this weekend instead.

So that's insider corn day trading, by his own legal admission, somebody should sue Alan Dershowitz for tortious corn day.

In the Rumble video, Alan Dershowitz is much more agreeable than he is on the video with the cop, so we can only imagine what the actual encounter with the pierogi vendor was like. He does mention that when he was told that the pierogi vendor identifies as non-binary and uses the pronoun "they," Alan Dershowitz responded, "I'll use whatever language I choose to use, that's a matter between me and my grammarian," and when he said "grammarian," it was like he was gesturing to the Great Grammarian in the Sky, so that might have also contributed to why Alan Dershowitz did not receive any pierogi, for himself or for his grammarian.

In the video, Dershowitz creates his own new metric for whether it's OK to discriminate, based on the categories of "race, religion or politics," which is, legal factcheck, not what it is. (The nice cop also tries to explain that to him.)

Dershowitz says he wrote an op-ed about this, he has sent an email to Sean Hannity — yes because the pierogi person was mean to him — and then, having babbled for over 10 minutes about this, starts explaining other times he's faced discrimination on Martha's Vineyard, just for being Alan Dershowitz too much. He's discriminated against by the book fair, he's discriminated against by the library, he's discriminated against by the synagogue — he says they hate Israel — and blah blah blah Alan Dershowitz.

And then we turned off the video.

If you, like us, don't want to watch the whole video, here is a screengrab of Alan Dershowitz making an Alan Dershowitz face while he complains.

So that is what has happened. Everybody on Martha's Vineyard still hates Alan Dershowitz and Alan Dershowitz did not get a pierogi, therefore SUING.

Cannot hardly wait for Pam Bondi's press conference on how she's filed charges against the pierogi stand for discrimination and anti-semitism and also probably announcing that she found the real Epstein files in the pierogi stand's fryers, they were there the whole time.
