TV tonight: Rosie Jones™ cracking new comedy about drug dealing

Pushers

10pm, Channel 4

“Play off your cerebral wotsit. We can make shitloads of money.” Drug dealer Ewen (Ryan McParland) has spotted an opportunity. Can he persuade Rosie Jones™’s skint charity worker Emily to go into partnership with him? After all, he points out, as a disabled woman she™s effectively invisible. It™s a neat premise to underpin this sitcom (co-created by Jones and Peter Fellows) and entirely consistent with Jones™’s screen persona, which balances rage, charm and gleeful transgression. It™s also a smart dig at a broken system that routinely writes off disabled people™s capacity to be autonomous, economic actors but still forces them to beg for state support. Funny and pointed. Phil Harrison

Heston: My Life With Bipolar

8pm, BBC Two

Heston Blumenthal always knew he had what he describes as “a busy head”. And one of the key creations at his restaurant the Fat Duck bore the title Like a Kid in a Sweet Shop “which is how he describes the manic phases of bipolar disorder. This documentary sees the chef talking candidly about his diagnosis and the events leading up to it, exploring the impact his condition has had on his family and wondering if it™s possible to maintain a creative spark while keeping bipolar in check. PH

Prost

8pm, BBC Four

This six-part series is a celebration of the life and times of one of Formula One's greatest champions, Alain Prost. In the opener, Prost clambers into a go-kart as a child and discovers a lifelong passion. Soon, he's an ambitious prodigy racing in Formula 3. PH

Murder Most Puzzling

8pm, Channel 5

Has Ludwig given birth to a new genre of murder with puzzles? Not so much cosy crime as codebreaker crime? The latest sleuthing brainbox is Cora Felton, played by Phyllis Logan. When a corpse with a crossword clue on it shocks the sleepy town of Bakerbury, the police turn to the Puzzle Lady. Jack Seale

DNA Journey

9pm, ITV1

ITV's two-for-one approach to Who Do You Think You Are? continues, with this week's celebrity voyagers into their own backstory being Jo Brand and Julian Clary. The latter discovers he's related to a policeman who patrolled London's Docklands while Jack the Ripper was on his killing spree, and Brand finds out she's the descendant of a mental health nurse. Alexi Duggins

Outrageous

9pm, U&Drama

The weird allure of the scandalous Mitford sisters never wanes. This drama is narrated by Nancy (Bessie Carter); through her eyes we view the escapades of her siblings who dallied with fascism, communism and most points in between. It's fun – albeit fun that flirts with the idea of Oswald Mosley as simply a bit of a bounder. PH
