TV tonight: a heart-racing series following RNLI rescue missions

Saving Lives at Sea

8pm, BBC Two

Storm Eunice is about to hit the south coast – not the best day for a windsurfer to be caught out there, especially as he needs diabetes medication. But the Portsmouth rescue team aren't even sure whether they can get to him. Will they make it there in time? More tense scenes in this heart-racing series that highlights the great work of the RNLI. Hollie Richardson

Supercruising: Life at Sea

8pm, Channel 4

It's the penultimate episode in this not-at-all riveting series about life at sea on cruise ships. There's excitement as some of the higher-up staff take a break on a private beach in the Bahamas (not so exciting for everyone else – or us at home), while back on board the MS Nieuw Statendam, the chefs give passengers a cooking lesson. HR

Tom Kerridge Cooks Spain

8.30pm, ITV1

The popular chef drives through Cuenca, a mountain town in north-eastern Spain, then Murcia, a university city in the south-east, in this week's foodie tour. In Cuenca, he gets on a tractor and farms intense garlic. Over in Murcia, he investigates the story behind the area's reputation as "the fruit basket of Spain". HR

The Gone

9pm, BBC Two

We're nearing the end of this patient New Zealand-set thriller and a look at Mervin's farm suggests a man with an unhealthy interest in the business of serial killing. Elsewhere, Aileen (Carolyn Bracken) has a spiritual awakening and reconciles with Richter (Richard Flood) as a result. But with a prison break imminent, it seems any happy endings will be hard won. Phil Harrison

Ben Fogle: New Lives in the Wild

9pm, Channel 5

In a new exploration series, Ben Fogle heads to Africa where he meets the Norwegian model Aleks, who has made a home in the deserts of Botswana. He helps her to build bush fences to keep out wild lions and meets her local community, while finding out how she ended up moving there. HR

The Walking Dead: Dead City

10pm, Sky Max

Negan (Jeffrey Dean Morgan) may be the last gang leader standing in the ruins of New York, but his young ward is in a bad way. A mercy dash to Bellevue hospital for medical supplies is required. Meanwhile, Maggie (Lauren Cohan) considers whether to enter into a risky alliance to track down her erratic son Hershel, last spotted trying to poison the water supply. Graeme Virtue

Film choice

Grand Hotel (Edmund Goulding, 1932), 7pm, BBC Four

"I want to be alone!" Greta Garbo is at her most diva-ish in this 1932 Oscar winner, a seductive pre-Code melodrama set exclusively in an opulent Berlin hotel. She is a depressed ballerina given a new lease of life after falling for John Barrymore's Baron Felix von Geigern. Sadly, he has plans to steal her jewels to pay off his debts – but he's also in love with her so it's not a simple proposition. Lionel Barrymore's terminally ill bookkeeper, a young Joan Crawford as a flirtatious stenographer, and Wallace Beery's bumptious factory owner are other guests adding to the social whirl. Simon Wardell
