TV tonight: Amol Rajan explores grief and faith by the Ganges

Amol Rajan Goes to the Ganges

9pm, BBC One

Journalist Amol Rajan has been “in a bit of a funk” since his father died three years ago. Rajan gradually realised that his mother, a practising Hindu, “seemed to have an emotional toolkit that I lacked”. Has this lack of faith made it harder to come to terms with bereavement? With this question in mind, he travels to India to take part in the Hindu festival Kumbh Mela. Initially, he’s slightly overwhelmed by the intensity of the pilgrimage, not to mention emotionally triggered by seeing so many older Indian men who remind him of his dad. And he’s soon faced with more tragedy, as a crush causes 30 deaths. In the wake of this new sadness, can he find closure? Phil Harrison

Side Hustlers

8pm, U&W

A hyperactive transatlantic twist on Dragons’ Den. In this new series, a group of ambitious female entrepreneurs (touting everything from food trucks to underwear) are mentored by potential investors, Emma Grede – the Good American CEO who is in business with the Kardashians – and model Ashley Graham, as they attempt to turn side hustles into main gigs. Not everyone can win investment, so expect plenty of drama. PH

Electric Cars: How Safe Are They?

8pm, Channel 5

As tech journo Georgie Barrat says: “Technology is amazing, but also, it can go wrong.” With the UK aiming to phase out all new petrol and diesel cars by 2030, this programme claims to take a balanced look at EV safety, and look beyond scare stories of electric cars suddenly bursting into flames on the driveway. Ali Catterall

Long Lost Family: Born Without Trace

9pm, ITV1

The stirring series that gives closure to foundlings continues, with two more adoptees gaining insight into their mysterious starts in life. Davina McCall and Nicky Campbell help Jon – who was abandoned in 1984 and briefly named Harry, after the then newborn prince – and Tina, who was left outside a hospital in Stoke-on-Trent in 1970. Nicole Vassell

The Kim Kardashian Diamond Heist

9pm, BBC Three

In October 2016, Kim Kardashian had a terrible night in Paris: armed robbers forced their way into her hotel room, tied her up, and made off with jewellery worth €10m. The brazen theft sparked a long-running investigation that culminated in a trial at the Palais de Justice last month. The whole story is unpacked here by insiders. Graeme Virtue

Murder on the Doorstep: The Killer Clown

9pm, Sky Crime

A nightmare scenario unfolds in this series exploring one of the weirder murder cases in living memory. Why did a person dressed as a clown shoot Marlene Warren dead on her own doorstep in Florida in 1990? Here are all the key elements of the case. PH
