TV tonight: the prolific child abuser who never faced justice

See No Evil

9pm, Channel 4

This devastating two-part documentary details the crimes of John Smyth, a barrister involved in conservative evangelical Christian camps. Over the course of four decades, Smyth subjected more than 100 boys to horrific sexual and physical abuse. Why wasn't he stopped? Witnesses, including his victims and his own children, speak about life in close proximity to this monstrous man – and about the cover-up that meant he never faced justice. Phil Harrison

Grand Designs: House of the Year

8pm, Channel 4

Tonight we find out who has won Riba's House of the Year 2025. But before the grand reveal, Kevin, Damion and Natasha walk us through more stunning properties, including a bungalow that's "part house, part hedgehog" and a gorgeously souped-up "cowshed made livable." Ali Catterall

Winter on the Farm

8pm, Channel 5

Warm good humour counteracts the frosty soil as Helen Skelton, Jules Hudson and JB Gill return to Cannon Hall farm in South Yorkshire for a three-parter. This week there are new goats to welcome and Highland cattle to prep for an end-of-year show in Carlisle. Plus, the odd hearty seasonal recipe. Jack Seale

Shetland

9pm, BBC One

It's the conclusion of another season of dark deeds and delightful scenery, and Ashley Jensen's DI Calder has woken up with a hangover and new information about Eadie Tulloch's murder. However, extracting a confession from their suspect proves tricky, even before shocking revelations about the area's hidden past. PH

Ellie Taylor: Palavering!

10pm, Sky Comedy

She appeared in Ted Lasso and hit the dancefloor in Strictly. Now Ellie Taylor's back on stage in a standup special. Her promised topics in this show include Strictly (naturally), keeping the spark alive in a marriage and how to cope when you end up doubling the number of children you own. Alexi Duggins

Saving Mum: Our Family Secret11.10pm, Channel 4

Many people have complex relationships with their mothers; not so many would choose to address them via an ayahwasca ceremony. But that decision is at the heart of Maleena Pone's film as she explores a legacy characterised by grief, silence and alcoholism, and looks to break the cycle. PH

Film choiceLost in Translation, (Sofia Coppola, 2003), 10am, Sky Cinema Greats

Despite its sometimes stereotypical treatment of Japan, Sofia Coppola's film is a sweet romantic drama tinged with melancholy. Film star Bob (Bill Murray) is in Tokyo to shoot a whiskey commercial; Charlotte (Scarlett Johansson) is idling by herself while her photographer husband works. Meeting in their hotel bar, they recognise kindred lost souls and team up to immerse themselves in a civilisation largely alien to them. Basically, it's Brief Encounter with added karaoke, sushi and miscommunication. Simon Wardell
