Rudy Giuliani Seen A Ghost

Well, unless he's a hologram or some kind of fancy dan replicant out of an Alien movie, Rudy Giuliani is not currently dead. Your thoughts and prayers made him better, yes they did!

And now that he's up and about, he's telling stories of what happened when he was dead, or undead, or whatever they call whatever happened to him.

He seened a ghost!

No, it was not the ghost of Roy Cohn, and it was not Meryl Streep playing Ethel Rosenberg in Angels In America.

He told it all to his weird-looking stinky boy son Andrew when he woke up, so he wouldn't forget, and then he started talking about it on his podcast, which is on the MyPillow guy's "network."

"I also had a very, very significant spiritual experience at a time in which I was in a state of like... out of it," he said on his Wednesday return to broadcasting. "I would equate it to a dream of my being on line headed for, I can't say headed for heaven, headed for a trial by St. Peter."

Was St. Peter going to disbar him too?

What? We are just asking.

Also, don't you love how these stories always conform to the person's exact religious beliefs, and typically a sort of Hollywood version of them at that? Very curious!

OK, so Rudy was in line for his disbarment hearing in hell and ...

“There was a very significant intervention by my Peter, I have my own Peter ...”

Ah shit. His Peter like his chram? He got a boner in his coma?

(For the second time, we are reminded of Angels In America, remember how Prior Walter always got a boner whenever the angel was near?)
