Andy Ogles Didn't Tweet Anything MAGA Republicans Don't Actually Believe

Andy Ogles, he is this Tennessee Republican congressman who is dumb as a bag of hammers, and also just a complete sack of shit. (Yes, he's the one who raised \$23,000 to build a burial garden for stillborn infants, which was subsequently never built.)

Ogles thought he had a good tweet to commemorate Nuclear Family Month, the thing conservative Christian white nationalists and kid-touchers are doing as counterprogramming to Pride Month this June. Sarah Huckabee Sanders is calling it "Fidelity Month." Kay Ivey in Alabama is calling it "Strong Families Month." And in Ogles's Tennessee it's Nuclear Family Month.

It's all euphemisms, what they mean is that God hates fags. They're vile, irredeemable, bigoted human excrement, and that's what they're doing to oppose Pride month.

But Republicans didn't like Ogles's tweet, we guess because it was a little bit too honest about their intentions:

Hasn't Ogles heard? We're only saying "nuclear family month." We're not saying the first part about God hating fags right now. That completely defeats the purpose of creating a euphemism like "nuclear family month"!

Dumbass!

Immediately came the condemnations, rushing down like waters, from Democrats of course (like Katherine Clark above), but also from Republicans who were appalled, appalled at this bald-faced show of bigotry by one of their own. A Republican acting like an anti-gay lunatic bigot? No they never!

There was New York Rep. Mike Lawler (R-swing district), who came out, well, swinging:

After Ogles deleted the tweet, Lawler added to CNN:

"I'm not going to dispute his statement, but the fact is that tweet was offensive. I know it was offensive to many colleagues and staff members here, and you know it was pretty clear that it was fing stupid so," Lawler said.

Lawler continued “everybody has family members, friends, neighbors, colleagues, staff that are in fact homosexual, and to somehow insinuate that they are less than or not Americans, or should not be Americans, is idiotic and offensive. And I was clear about that yesterday. I’m glad he deleted the post, but do better.”

“Do better,” said the white Republican. LOL.

Rep. Nick Lalota, also a Republican from a swing district, told CNN, “Gross, disgusting tweet, inappropriate. All Americans, regardless of their sexual orientation, should enjoy the protections of America, our Constitution, and all of our blessings.”

But it wasn’t just Republicans from swing districts who are already worried they’re going to lose big in November.

Ted Cruz got in on the woke “let’s not kill gays” bandwagon:

Asked by TMZ whether he agreed with the post, Sen. Ted Cruz, R-Texas, said, “For all of recorded history, homosexuals have been part of humanity.”

“I’m quite libertarian by nature,” he continued. “I think the behavior of consenting adults is their business.”

Thanks, Ted.

Even Tennessee bonkers yokel Rep. Tim Burchett said, “I thought it was wrong. You know what people do in their own dadgum bedrooms, is their business.” And House Speaker Mike Johnson, a bigot’s bigot, one of the most disturbed Christian nationalists in the whole country, started talking about what the Bible is unequivocal about:

“The Bible is unequivocal, We’re supposed to love our neighbor as ourselves. Everybody is supposed to treat every single person with dignity and respect whether we agree with them or not. That’s a Christian virtue, that’s a biblical virtue, it’s an American virtue. It’s part of we are,” Johnson said. “Andy took it down and did it publicly. He should have done that. It was the right response.”

Hahahaha, fuck off.
