TV tonight: Tim Robinson's office comedy just gets freakier and funnier

The Chair Company

9.45pm, Sky Comedy

Tim Robinson and Zach Kanin's office comedy just gets freakier and funnier – and somehow, it's quite touching too. As Ron (Robinson) gets deeper into the (supposed) conspiracy theory behind Tecca chair company, he has tracked down CFO Ken Tucker. Of course, when he finds him things just become even more wildly confusing. Meanwhile, Douglas is back in a wheelchair. Hollie Richardson

Once Upon a Time in Space

9pm, BBC Two

The third part of this space-race documentary tells the stellar story of the International Space Station and its construction. In 1996, Nasa unveiled the 44 individuals tasked with this colossal undertaking – and several of them are interviewed here. It was intended as a symbol of global unity, but the astronomical costs would further strain US-Russian relations. Ellen E Jones

The Forsytes

9pm, Channel 5

Love once again chafes against the expectations of society and family in this dramatisation of the John Galsworthy books. Soames Forsyte is on honeymoon in Paris with his thrillingly unsuitable wife Irene, but is soon intimidated by her free-speaking friends then horrified by a ballet. Can he whisk her back to the bosom of London and reassert his dynastic values? Jack Seale

It: Welcome to Derry

9pm, Sky Atlantic

The 1960s-set prequel series to Stephen King's horror doorstopper continues, with another gang of kids in Derry getting terrorised by genuinely nightmarish visions. So far no sign of Bill Skarsgård in his terrifying Pennywise form, but, as the military intensifies its search for a fear-emitting weapon, the killer clown must surely pop up soon. Graeme Virtue

Pete Wicks: For Dogs' Sake

9pm, U&W

Flower the border collie is in the behavioural block – can she gain the trust of strangers again? And Marvin the gentle spaniel has a painful ear infection – can he avoid surgery? It's the final episode of this heartwarming series with tattooed softy Pete Wicks as he helps out at a dog shelter. HR

Leonard and Hungry Paul

10pm, BBC Two

Julia Roberts continues to narrate the quirky, feel-good story of a young man finding life after his mother's death. Leonard (Alex Lawther) is on cloud nine after a first date with colleague Shelley (Jamie-Lee O'Donnell) – but why is she being shifty about another date? Elsewhere, Hungry Paul (Laurie Kynaston) has been shortlisted for the email sign-off phrase competition. HR

Film Choice

Mr Burton (Marc Evans, 2025), 8pm, BBC One

Marc Evans's drama is a fact-based tale of how poor miner's son Rich Jenkins became RSC star Richard Burton – but it's also an affecting story of fathers and sons, what you gain by leaving and what you lose. The young Richard (Harry Lawtey, making a good fist of that sonorous voice) has a bleak future in his industrial Port Talbot home town. But his English teacher, Philip Burton (Toby Jones), sees promise in the would-be actor and becomes the mentor his drunken dad will never be. However, the lifelong demons that already assail Richard start to warp their relationship. Simon Wardell
