Axios Chips A Tooth Polishing Dear Leader's Knob

The Axios founders Mike Allen and Jim VandeHei on Bari Weiss's show or something, screengrab.

The headline says "Axios," but this post starts with their main competitor. Politico reports today:

President Donald Trump is angry. His team is exasperated. The Republican-controlled House is in near rebellion.

Trump and his closest allies thought they'd spend the summer taking a well-earned victory lap, having coaxed Congress into passing the megabill, bullied foreign governments into a slew of new trade arrangements, convinced NATO allies to spend billions more on collective defense and pressed world leaders to bow to various other demands from Doha to The Hague.

"POTUS is clearly furious," said a person close to the White House, who, like others in this story, was granted anonymity to discuss the mood inside the West Wing. "It's the first time I've seen them sort of paralyzed."

Hahahahahaha, wheeeeeeeee! We did it! President Project 2025 and his fascist terrorist Christian Nazi coup pals are spinning their wheels, they're so fucking mad, and it's because of a situation of their own creation, which they entirely deserve!

And really, the question remains: What is in those Epstein files? Pam Bondi should open those folders on her desk and start sounding out all the pervert words about Trump, since House Speaker Mike Johnson is too busy giving Trump and his dead pedophile best friend Jeffrey Epstein the old Southern Baptist treatment, and Republican senators (including bigtime erstwhile Epstein hunter Marsha Blackburn!) had an opportunity to subpoena Epstein financial files last year and they were apparently doing coverups for Trump even then.

OK, so that's that Politico article. (UPDATE: And we scheduled this post just before the Wall Street Journal on Trump being officially in the Epstein files came out. Wheeeee! More on that tomorrow, obviously.)

We'll get to Axios's dick-polishing — we are setting up a point that we are making! — after this video from the president, speaking to Republican lawmakers last night and essentially admitting that all his nonsense Obama treason shit is literally just his way of trying to distract people from Epstein, and directing Republicans to do the same:

Here's the transcript, it goes nicely with all the other Trump cankle-to-brain leakage we were discussing earlier this morning:

"They want to do anything to get us off the subject of making America great again. And we're not going to put up with it. And remember, don't let them forget, it's so important, Obama cheated on the election. Look, the camera just went off. [This is a lie.] Obama, the red light just went off. Can you believe these people, how bad they are? Obama cheated, when they give you all the nonsense, Obama cheated and his people cheated, but he was there. Did you ever hear this?

"They talk about, if they ever even mention it, they never mention his name. Just the opposite with me. But they only mention my name. They don't mention any of you guys. They don't mention Tom. They don't mention Steve. They don't mention our great speaker. They mention Trump all the time. I'd like to have him mention you.

"But remember this, Obama cheated on the election, and we have it cold, hard, blue, and it's getting even more so because the stuff that's coming in is not even believable. So, and you should mention that every time they give you a question that's [about Epstein] not appropriate, just say, 'Oh, by the way, Obama cheated on the election.' You'll watch the camera turn off instantly."

Fam, does that sound to you like a president who is winning? Or does it sound like a president who is a total loser, who is 79 years old going on croaked, who is babbling all his greatest conspiracy theory hits like a dementia patient? He's talking about things that he hallucinated happened three presidential administrations ago. "Obama cheated on the election!" he cries, while the nurse drains his cankles and asks him to count backward.

All of that brings us to how Axios — specifically its chief hacks Jim VandeHei and Mike Allen — is sorely upset today that Donald Trump is literally doing so much winning that the American people appear to have become sick of the winning.

Behind the Curtain: Losing by winning

Jim VandeHei, Mike Allen

Oh is that what's happening, oh sage access journalists? Tell us more!

Here is how this appalling screed begins:

President Trump, in terms of raw accomplishments, crushed his first six months in historic ways. Massive tax cuts. Record-low border crossings. Surging tariff revenue. Stunning air strikes in Iran. Modest inflation.

Did he, Axios? Did he crush it? Were the Iranian air strikes stunning? The ones that actually only destroyed one out of three Iranian nuclear sites, which wasn't really surprising, since intel assessments from the get-go suggested Secretary Shitfaced's mission was kind of a dud?
